Writing

In our modern world the problem of communication by the Internet is very actual. Everyone, I think, has got an account in Facebook or Twitter, 'cause this is a great way to connect with your friends in every time you want, without <sup>leaving</sup> a house. It's really convenient and, frankly speaking, communication in the Internet is more easier than one in the real life. Also, you can have friends oversea, in other part of globe. It's so cool! But, of course, even there <sup>are some</sup> disadvantages are.

Firstly, messages don't show person's emotions, so you can't see how does he or she <sup>wo</sup> react. "Is she happy or angry?" "Does he hate me or love me?". In the other hand it's a plus if you got a bad news or going to argue with someone, but I don't recommend it. I did thus and it didn't give me nothing good. But when I spoke with person in reality everything was OK. (158)

Furthermore, person changes in the Internet. I don't know why, but I often noticed it. Sometimes he/she changes to the good side, but usually doesn't. That's why I prefer communication in reality instead of one by the Internet.

In conclusion I want to say that you can use the Internet to connect with your friends, but simply remember to meet with them in real life. It's really better for your friendship!
